

Medical Manufacturing at Kimball Electronics

A Story of a Lasting Relationships and Global Success

A shining example of a customer relationship in our Medical end market is one that has lasted for over 18 years. In 2005, a partnership began with a small medical device manufacturer, and after a larger company purchased them in 2007, the relationship continued to grow.

Over the years, Kimball Electronics has manufactured printed circuit assemblies (PCAs), upper level assemblies, and system level devices for many business groups within the customer's organization. Products for this customer are now produced in five of Kimball Electronics' worldwide facilities and are shipped to multiple customer locations around the world.

Today, Kimball Electronics is a preferred global Electronics Manufacturing Services (EMS) provider for this medical customer and has received two Supplier Excellence awards from them. Kimball Electronics is proud to be a part of their success and continues to partner with them to create innovative and connected solutions across the entire patient care journey.
